The Identity of Lakes Albert Nyanza and Tanganyika Proved.

BETAILS OF SIR SAMUEL BAREA'S EXPEDITION IN A PRICE.

KIXTROUN, VIA Alexandria, July 9. I hasten to commindent to lyou facts of the histon to commindent to lyou fact the lake regions and the far South. On Sunday, the 29th of June, the English Pasha arrived at Khartonia Lieutenant Haker, and seven English engineers, besides his own personal attendants. They had travelled hither from Gondokora, using one of the steamers which had been take up cauntry for the avaigation and occupitation of the latter of the histon to an an occupitation of the latter of the histon and an occupitation of the latter of the histon and an occupitation of the latter of the histon and an occupitation of the latter of the histon and men were left dead on the route. At the end of this perilous week the English Pasha came to the province of Rewinka, a chief hostile to Kabrika, and welcome assistance was then obtained. The pursuit had been already abandoned, but with a view to punish Kabriki, it was arrainged that Rewinka should (farnish 2,000 armed men, and that these, with thirty picked Egyptian soldiers should return towards Mosindi, and do their best to take and kill the treacherous negros. Baker promised that if this expedition was successful Rewinka should be appointed governor of his own and Kabriki's district in the name of the viceroy of Egypt. With the remainder of his force the Pasha then returned northwards towards Fatiko but on reaching a place called Lazarita (?) he and his men were unexpectedly fired upon from the houses of the slave-traders there. Thirty of Baker's soldiers were thus slain; the remainder entrenched themselves till assistance could be obtained, and then issued from their entrenchment to attack the traders who held a stream resident. tance could be obtained, and then issued from their entrenchment to attack the tra-ders, who held a strong position in dense thickets of reeds. The attack was very suc-cessful, the reed beds were taken by storm and 140 of the slavers' party were slain, many prisoners being also captured, while the remainder fled inland. The captives, in explanation of the attack, made mon Sir in explanation of the attack, made upon Sir Samuel's command, said that the orders of their masters and of the chiefs friendly to them were to kill the "Nazarene"—mean-

After a period of repose, which was imperatively needed. Bakeer commenced systematically to organize the districts which were in his possession. He made Fatiko the chief town of the new territory, and appointed superintendents at the other stations. Before long the natives settled down wonderfully well under the new government, and appeared exceedingly satisfied with the safety and quiet which it afforded. The light tribute exacted of a basket of bread and a bundle of grass per month for each hut was paid with alacrity; and when Sir Samuel finally went northward, having established the reinforcements sent him along the annexed region, the negroes at Fatiko gave him the most vociferous farewells, calling him "father" and 'master," and looking upon him as their future protector. The term of the contract signed by Sir Samuel Baker and by the English engineers with the Khedive has now expired, and, having made all arrangements, the Pasha embarked at Gondokora in one of the steamers brought up country by the expedition. Another vessel of the ments, the Pasha embarked at Gondokora in one of the steamers brought np country by the expedition. Another vessel of the same model has been successfully carried as far as Gondokora, and as soon as camel transport can be obtained it may be taken to the lakes and set affoat there. The third of the three iron vessels sent up in pieces with the same object lies yet at Khartoun, the difficulties of transport having proved extremly great.

difficulties of transport having proved ex-tremly great.

Next to Fatiko the chief station of the new territory will be Gondokora. Baker has marked out eight more spots as princi-pal posts, and these will constitute a chain leading from Nubia to the Albert Nyanza. One thousand additional troops have been ordered down to complete the garrison of these stations.

ordered down to complete the garrison of these stations.

Thus much for the political portion of the tidings brought by the gallant Pasha. I have turther a most important geographical discovery to communicate, one which cannot fail, I think, to astound many scientific men in England. It is declared as an ascertained fact by the returning party that lakes Tanganyika and Albert Nyanza are proved to be one and the same water. The length of this magnificent inland sea, thus for the first time made known to mankind, is not less than 700 miles, and it is announced as positive that a vessel can be is not less than 700 miles, and it is announced as positive that a vessel can be launched above Murchison's Falls, at the head of Nyanza, and sail away to Ujiji, or lower, through ten degrees of latitude.

I send you this intelligence direct from the lips of the emancipator of Central Africa.

Spurocon's Llustration of the Power of Prayer.—Mr. C. H. Spurgeon has said and done many things in his time in furtherance of what might be described as "jocular religion and comic salvation." But at the late anniversary of the London Missionary society, at Exeter hall, he outdid himself. Speaking of prayer, he said: "Oh for more prayer! I had an odd illustration of its power, the other day, in Italy. In the hotels there, there are little ivory buttons in the wall upon which you put your finger. They communicate with electric wires which ring the bells down-stairs. A friend came in to take tea with us, and I put my finger on the button, but nobedy came. I did it again; still nobody came. Yow, said my friend, 'I will put you up to a wrinkle—keep your finger on the button. If you only just put it on, it rings the bell; but if you keep your finger on, the bell will keep ringing down-stairs. Well, I did so; but even then the waiter did not come. At length my friend said, 'We have a couple of bed-rooms here; I will go into one, and your friend can go into the other; let us ring all three bells,

FAITH IN CHRIST A REFINING POWER.—
Nothing so refines the character, or so fits us for what is best in all our relations, as faith in Christ,—that is, a vital, practical faith in the divine ideas, the thoughts, affections, acts, which find their purest and fallest expression in him. Without this, men become narrow, hard and selfish as they advance in life. Side by side with them are people of a different sort. They seem at first to be interested in the same things. They are educated in the same things. They are educated in the same schools and churches, and apparently have the same ideas and principles. But they live in a different world. The ruling motive of their lives keeps them under the influence and control of a different realm. And so, with advancing years and experience, they go on deepening and ripening in all the finer elements of character. Their religion is one which goes down to the fundamental principles of holy and divine living. Their convictions, accompanied by a briger charity for others, grow firmer, and become more and more vital and vitalizing energies. Their affections are strengthened, while they are purified and mellowed by time. They gain influence and honor by the progress of thought and life. You fear no failure for them. Whatever else may fail, their characters cannot fail. They may change them. Whatever else may fail, their characters cannot fail. They may change their occupation, places of abode, associates. They may grow richer or poorer. But their principles of religious faith, their habits of moral rectitude, their life of love to God and love to man, can never change.

countered one the other day, of which Surveyor Meggs sends an account in which he says:

The horses got very restive under their pelting, and some of them unmanageable. Suddenly three vivid flashes of lightning struck the earth near us, and the most terrific storm I ever witnessed fell upon us. One of the soldiers, who probably had witnessed something of the kind before, cried out. "A hall-storm on the prairies. Go for the timber like—," and in an instant the troop was going down hill at a full ran. The hail now had attained the size of large marbles, and every one that struck raised a lump on the flesh. Many of us were thrown and some who succeeded in stopping their horses dismounted and tried to hold them. I had succeeded in getting off my horse, and was struggling with him, for he was frantic with pain, when two riderless steeds rushed by, and, with one jerk, he threw me headlong on the ground, wrenched the bridde from me, and disappeared in the dense mist. The pelting of the storm was terrible, and I rushed for shelter towards a little patch of brush, and crawled into it, to find two cavalry soldiers already there. But by setting my hat high up on my head, protected it from all but the sidelong stones, and shielded my body by stretching my cont over my arm, and holding that up high. I got some seven wells on the elbow, though, that left black and blue marks. You may judge of the force of the falling stones when I tell you that hats of felt were torn literjudge of the force of the falling stones when I tell you that hats of felt were torn literally to rage, and some stones even pene-trated the brims of thick straw hats. A silver cup (thick) which was exposed to the storm was indented as if by falling on the floor. I think the heavy hail must have lasted ten minutes. E. was exposed to it bare-headed, as he lost his hat and held on ing Baker-wherever and whenever they could. They all confirmed this declaration which was drawn up from their own mouths, signed and sealed by each, and then forto his horse during most of the storm, but had finally to let him go. E.'s head was completely covered with lumps as hig as the end of one's finger, and his back and shoul-ders looked as if some one had been beat-
